"That chap with the velvet vest carries his wad in his left hip pocket, Gabe!" he added in an undertone a moment later, speaking to an innocent looking man standing by his side.—Chicago Tribune.

Sir Thomas Hesketh, of London, is expected to visit Carson in a few days.

It is rumored that Cleveland's administration has instructed Minister Willis to restore the Hawaiian Queen.

It is proposed to give the old lode a thorough prospecting before the 1st of January, and set the Comstock on its feet again. Stocks are already booming.

A Destitute Family.

The Tribune of last evening calls attention to the fact that the family of Tony Kramer is in very destitute circumstances. The fact was accidentally discovered by some ladies who are now soliciting aid.

Mr. Kramer lost the use of his eyes several months ago and had always earned a good living until that time.

His wife is a proud spirited woman who kept her destitution to herself until it was discovered as above stated.

The present condition of the family comes from unavoidable misfortune, and the city of Carson ought to make quick response to their necessities.

The Loyal Circle of the King's Daughters will give an entertainment at Odd Fellows' Hall Wednesday night. Refreshments will be served at 25 cents per head. Admission 25 cents. The program will be published tomorrow. n7td

FROM CHICAGO.

Chicago, Oct. 20th, 1893.

ED. APPEAL.—As a matter of fact my last letters have not been written in Chicago at all but from various points along my route including Niagara Falls, Philadelphia, Washington and finally Portland Maine. I have also deceived you—or tried to—as to dates, as I have always dated backwards. This questionable method is poetic license as any poet will assure you. I now feel no restraint in telling you these facts as this will be the last of the World's Fair letters.

I like always to save the best things until the last—like eating the pie crust first and then having the solid cream, fruit or composition, as the case may be, to end up with. That is why I took my last week for the Art Palace and now end therewith.

The Art Palace faces a lagoon which gives an uninterrupted view, straight up to the Grand basin. The distance is considerable and therefore the scene embraces many of the finest of the matchless buildings. Broad, easy steps lead from the front entrance of the Palace to the water's edge. At the portico, huge pillars give the structures an air of imposing solidity and magnificence. The whole structure spreads in a broad style of architecture that is very pleasing. Two annexes are joined at the north side, reaching far along the roadway which fronts the buildings of foreign nations and some of our States. These annexes are each very large galleries in themselves, containing miles of splendid canvases. Beginning at the front entrance one is instantly in the presence of a bewildering aggregation of bronze and marble statuary exhibited by the artists of France and Great Britain. This gallery of statuary extends, in height, to the ceiling. It is a straight, wide hallway through the main part of the building and is crossed by a similar hallway which runs from the east to the west, at right angles to it. Thus the two hallways form a great cross, giving an immense floor space. Besides the two countries, already mentioned, the United States, Italy and Spain are nations conspicuously represented. In the corners, formed by the crossing of the galleries, the space is divided into a large number of small galleries in which every nation that paints, carves or chisels has its productions. The long galleries leading to the annexes and the annexes themselves, contain pictures from different countries and also the American loan collection. Lastly, on the second floor of the main building, surrounding the hallways of statuary, are galleries with innumerable booths, containing water-color pictures and every known style of black and white art.

So far I have spoken only of the arrangement. With a few more generalities I will proceed to a few individual mentions. You may have a faint idea but can hardly conceive, adequately, the immensity of the whole affair or the interminable task of trying to see, briefly, the statuary and colored art alone. Taken as a whole the French lead in every department. Their paintings are incomparable. So strong is the stamp of their school that one easily recognizes, among the best pictures of other countries, the work of the artist who has studied under the masters at Paris. Italy, Spain and Germany are well up on the list. The Germans are apt to go into tedious detail and they still characterize their work in the style which a Frenchman contemptuously calls "sweet," but nevertheless that progressive nation is abreast of the times in art as in everything else.

Great Britain's exhibit contains many pictures which have been accorded the highest praise from all beholders. Her collection is very fine. Sweden, Norway and the Society of Polish artists are represented. The latter easily leads the other two. Holland's space contains little but the result of the impressionist school. Very few of the results are clever, many are ghastly daubs. Belgium's exhibit is among the best. Russia has one of the smallest but most brilliant exhibits there. Hardly a picture upon her walls is even mediocre and on the other hand, several canvases there are among the favorites that thousands of visitors will remember. Japan is there with her fantastic art. Many of her pictures are of great excellence. Her art embroidery and statuary in carved woods and ivories are splendid. These people have also two vases and an incense burner in cloisonne which are the largest (and I may say perhaps the most beautiful) ever finished. They are about 6 or 8 feet high and of a diameter to complete a graceful symmetry. I have not the room to describe the tedious process of cloisonne work so that those who do not know what it is would do well to look it up. I will say that the effect in these immense pieces is a marvel of enduring beauty and art. [To be continued.]

Clerk.

The Bank vs. Spooner.

Yesterday the case of the Bullion Bank vs. Mrs. M. E. Spooner, came up in the U. S. District Court.

The plaintiff in its complaint asserts that it holds a claim against the property now held by Mrs. Spooner of $11,000, that it acquired possession of by a chattel mortgage executed by M. E. Spooner at which time at the solicitation of said Spooner, James Marshall was placed in charge as pledge holder, that Spooner then transferred the property to his wife and that she ordered Marshall off the premises.

The suit is to set aside the sale and recover possession of the property.

The defense denies most of the allegations of the complaint and alleges that the chattel mortgage having been made in California without the Bank having taken possession of the property is void. That the Bank attaching the property acknowledges the chattel mortgage to be void and that the attachment having been set aside the plaintiffs have no legal rights in the case.

The case comes up again in the U. S. Court today.
